BY WAY OF A FIRE ESCAPE

Harry Cantner Eludes a Nurse's Vigilance and Descends From the Fourth Floor—Gets About Scantily Clad Trying to Buy a Drug.

A fire escape leading from the fourth story to the ground was the means by which Harry Cantner, a patient at the Columbian University Hospital, 1325 H Street northwest, made his escape from the institution early Friday morning. Attired in a bath robe, slippers, and cap, and apparently suffering from mental derangement, Cantner finally, after wandering about, fell into the hands of Policeman Oriani, of the First precinct. He had made repeated attempts to purchase a drug at a downtown drug store and, unsuccessful. Later to the day he was returned to the hospital in charge of one of the physicians.

The escape was known to but few, for nobody appears to have seen the flight of Cantner as he slowly descended the fire escape from a small window of his ward. He had been a patient at the hospital for several weeks, and because of his affliction had been closely watched by nurses and physicians on duty. Thursday night the patient appeared somewhat more nervous than usual, lapsing into a delirium from time to time. Everything possible was done for him and more than once a physician was summoned to his bedside, while the night nurse remained in his ward, No. 5, a greater part of the time. Toward morning the patient appeared to sleep and the vigil of his nurse is said to have temporarily relaxed.

Shortly before daylight a call from an adjoining ward engaged the attention of the nurse. She left the bedside of Cantner to answer the summons and a moment later several minutes attending to the wants of another patient. When she returned to Ward 2 Cantner had gone. The nurse made a hasty search for the missing patient. The little window almost adjoining his bed was open, and he was seen to descend the fire escape. The nurse was the method of his escape that the nurse at once notified Dr. Riggles, of the resident staff of the hospital. The physician visited the ward and several patients were questioned, but none had seen the departure of Cantner.

Meanwhile the patient had made his way down four stories to the ground, and, as he descended, he was seen by a street watchman, who called to him. The street was deserted, and he hurried down Fourteenth Street toward Pennsylvania Avenue. The watchman called to him, but he did not stop. Several persons passed him by. Cantner finally walked into an Avenue drug store.

At the drug store Cantner is reported to have said, "I need sleep, and badly, too, so give me a drug that will give me sleep. Several persons passed him by. Cantner finally walked into an Avenue drug store.

GEORGE R. DAVIS CONVICTED.

A Jury Finds Him Guilty of Embezzling $1,000.

George R. Davis, formerly employed as a railway messenger by the Southern Express Company, was convicted yesterday in Criminal Court No. 1 of embezzling $1,000 belonging to the express company. The jury which returned the verdict against Davis recommended him to the mercy of the court. Davis' trial began Monday last.

When the verdict was announced, Cook, counsel for the defendant, stated to the court that he would possibly file a motion for a new trial on Monday.

The case was submitted to the jury at 10 o'clock a. m., and at 12:10 o'clock p. m. the jurors returned to the courtroom and announced the result of their deliberations. Because of the absence of Cook, counsel for the defendant, there was a wait of about ten minutes, during which a solemn silence prevailed.

During this time Davis sat scanning the faces of the jurors. He did not show the slightest sign of nervousness or fear, and he received the announcement of the result without a tremor.

Justice Barnard, who presided during the trial, when the jury delivered its verdict ordered Davis to be remanded to jail to await sentence. The prisoner was taken in charge by Deputy Marshal Cook.

Davis was formerly employed by the Southern Express Company as a railway messenger. His run was between Atlanta, Ga., and Washington. On July 2, 1899, a package containing $1,000 was misappropriated by Davis, who was then the person responsible for its disappearance.

Investigation developed that some one had a real similar to those used by the express company in sending money packages shipped through its agency.

Arthur Baumgartner, of the city, identified Davis as the man for whom he had made such a seal. When confronted with this testimony Davis was at the local office of the company, and upon Baumgartner identifying him the man for whom he was made a seal similar to those used by the express company, Davis drew a pistol from his pocket and fired at him.

For this Davis was indicted by the grand jury and placed on trial for the murder of Baumgartner. He was convicted and sentenced to two and one-half years' imprisonment in the penitentiary.

He was afterwards released by the President, and soon after his prosecution for embezzlement was commenced. Ashley M. Gould, the Assistant District Attorney, represented the Government during the trial.
